A LESSON FOR VIRGINIA

AS PRESIDENT of the Sophomore Council at Wildwood College, Virginia Bahe made an efficient as well as pretty leader. As Sid Quin well phrased it, "It isn't every guy who can pick a girl with brains in the upper story as well as looks on the face." And just now, as member of that council, he was admiring his girl as she spoke. He liked to look at that upturned nose, those dazzling azure eyes, and the light brown hair that definitely refused to remain on one side of her charming head.

"It has been the custom of the Sophomore class to raise the minimum sum of $2,000 each year. This money is then turned over as a gift to the Wildwood Nursery Group to help them in their wonderful work. Any suggestions how we are going to raise that money?"

Bert Hastum was a practical fellow, no doubt about it. He put his hand into his right pocket and came out with thirty-five cents in change which he placed on the table.

"No use kidding ourselves," he began, "the commodity known as cash is getting to be a rare item with most of us. Considering all the expenses we have and the fact that prices seem headed for the sky, how can we raise that dough?"

They said at Wildwood College that Edith Marks must have been born with a devilish imp inside of her. Others merely remarked she liked Sid Quinn and was sore because Virginia had a one hundred per cent hold on that male specimen.

"Seems to me we have a president with lots of brain. I make a motion we let her find the solution and back her to the limit."

Exactly one second later there was the desired reaction to that motion. All the students agreed that Virginia was capable of finding the answer of how to raise the money.

"Remember," warned Virginia with a certain determination in her voice that sort of informed the gang she had anticipated this course of action, "You are telling me to go ahead on my own. Well that's what I am going to do."

When the meeting had adjourned, Sid Quinn walked Virginia down the south path to Hodges Avenue. Virginia lived in town with her parents and Sid lived at the dormitory.

"I'll expect you over the house at nine this evening," she said, "and if you coax me I'll explain my plan to you."

Since Mr. and Mrs. Bahe had decided to see a movie, Sid found himself in the living room alone with Virginia who showed him something that looked like a large travelling case.

"That's a tape recorder," she informed her boy friend. "My Uncle Phil gave it to me for a birthday present. I didn't tell you that I had it because I wanted to try out an idea. Now watch me."

Virginia opened the top of the recorder. Then she inserted the plug into an electric socket. She placed a reel on the left side of the recorder, threaded the tape, got it into the right reel and then let the recorder play. She then sat down next to Sid and explained her idea.

"Everyone is crazy about the songs of John Arkin. He's the latest sensation of the nation. Mention his name and every teen age girl will just swoon. I have on that reel every one of his songs which I took off the radio. Now listen to him sing his most famous song, Some Sympathy."

And from the loudspeaker came the refrain that John Arkin had made famous.

"When I have a heartache, only thing I can take, is just
your sympathy,
"When I feel downright blue,
then I think of you, and your sympathy."

Virginia suddenly stopped the tape recorder. She ran her hand through Sid's hair and mussed it up. Then she opened his shirt collar.

"Now you look something like John Arkin," she said, "and all you have to do is get on the stage and pantomine with your lips as though you were singing. I'll hook up the tape recorder to the main panel and it will come out of all the loudspeakers. You will sing into a dummy mike. Clever idea, isn't it?"

Three times Sid tried to answer and the words just stuck in his throat. He loved his girl but he couldn't let her do this. Finally he said just what he thought.

"Remember what they taught us in our Freshman year in our Moral and Ethics course? You can't use a dishonest means to attain a good end. Sure, it's a wonderful thing to raise the money for the Nursery Group. But you are really fooling the people. And my girl can't do that."

"Is that an ultimatum you are handing me?" challenged Virginia.

"If that's what you want to call it, then I guess it is an ultimatum," snapped back Sid who realized he had to make a choice.

"Then good evening, Mr. Quinn," intoned a nasty voice, "I can't say it has been pleasant seeing you here."

For the next four days Virginia kept all the boys and girls taking Art 1 and Art 2 busy making posters. Then they were distributed all over town and the sale of tickets began. Dean Marthta Coogwell stopped Virginia in the corridor and spoke to her.

"Mr. Halsey of the Wildwood Press called my office half an hour ago. Said he would give you all the publicity you wanted and free. You can call him back and he will print anything you want."

When Virginia made the call she was very careful in the way she worded her sentences.

"All tickets have been sold for this great event. The audience will enjoy hearing the songs of John Arkin and the money goes to a worthy cause. Every cent of it."

Virginia had made all her plans so she alone would know about the tape recorder. The curtain would go up and the audience probably would be disappointed. And what could they do? Virginia received a telephone call at her home to report to the Dean's office at 6:30 that evening. She gobbled a quick bite and rushed over to the office. And to her utter amazement she was kept waiting until 8:30. It seemed like years and then Dean Cogwell spoke to her softly.

"Every seat is taken tonight. The people have come here to hear John Arkin sing in person. I know they wouldn't be disappointed."

Suddenly tears formed in Virginia's eyes and she sobbed.

"I've done a terrible thing. I was going to hook up my tape recorder and let the people listen to the songs I recorded. Oh, I have to go out there and tell them I tried to fool them. Sure, my objective was good but it was a dishonest means. I've been punished terribly. I lost the nicest fellow I ever knew. Now let me go out to the stage and confess. It will be good for me."

Virginia walked down the aisle followed by the Dean. As she mounted the stage there was a tremendous applause for her. Bewildered she looked at the Dean.

"You spoke to me at my desk and forgot my microphone. I had it hooked up to the speaker system. But now, as they say, let the show begin."

The curtain went up and on the stage was John Arkin himself with his pianist. He was holding the hand of Sid Quinn. Then he took hold of Virginia's hand and joined the two hands together.

"Before I sing my first song," he explained, "I too have something to say. Sid Quinn is my son. His mother died when he was a baby. But like a fool I didn't want my public to know I had a teen age boy because they might think I was an old man. But Sid called me and explained the situation to me. So here goes my first song." And he nodded to pianist and began to sing,

"When I have a heartache, only thing I can take, is your sympathy."

Virginia and Sid moved to the side of the stage and there was nothing to say that couldn't be better expressed by the way they held hands.

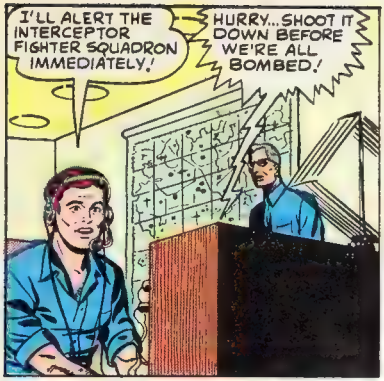
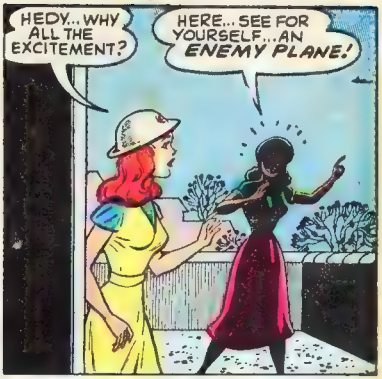
LOOK!! A PLANE! QUICK, CALL HEADQUARTERS!!
RELAX... IT'S AN AMERICAN PASSENGER PLANE... IT'S LISTED RIGHT HERE ON OUR SCHEDULE... BESIDES, NO ENEMY WOULD FLY IN WITH ALL ITS SIGNAL LIGHTS ON!
TIME PASSES ON...
I'M THIRSTY... THINK YOU CAN HANDLE THINGS WHILE I RUN DOWN FOR A QUICK DRINK OF WATER?
I CAN HANDLE THINGS EVEN IF YOU GO FOR A SLOW DRINK!
OH, OH! ANOTHER PLANE... AND IT'S NOT ON OUR SCHEDULE... AND IT HAS NO LIGHTS!
HELLO, HEADQUARTERS... POST 13 REPORTING... ENEMY PLANE HEADING EAST!



I'LL ALERT THE INTERCEPTOR FIGHTER SQUADRON IMMEDIATELY!
HURRY... SHOOT IT DOWN BEFORE WE'RE ALL BOMBED!



HEDY... WHY ALL THE EXCITEMENT?

I CAN'T EXPLAIN WHY IT HAS NO LIGHTS OR WHY IT'S NOT ON OUR SCHEDULE, BUT I'M POSITIVE IT'S ONE OF OUR B-36 BOMBERS!
ULP! AND I HAD 'EM SEND UP FIGHTER PLANES TO SHOOT IT DOWN...

OHHHHH... I DON'T FEEL SO GOOD ALL OF A SUDDEN... I'M GOING TO LIE DOWN AWHILE...
OKAY, HEDY!
